The Bad Larrys

The Bad Larrys return to MontanaFair August 7th-15th.
This talented acoustical duo from the Flathead Valley in Montana features Jay Aiken on acoustic guitar and Scott Moore on upright bass. Their signature sound showcases tight vocal harmonies with amusing and often off-beat story telling: fun enough for the young and smart enough for the adult.

The Bad Larrys play all styles of American music: Folk, Country, Blues, Old Time Rock and Roll, and Bluegrass. They play everything from John Prine and Johnny Cash, to Creedence Clearwater and Queen: all with a touch of humor.

The Bad Larrys do Good: In 2008, The Bad Larrys had a part in raising close to $50,000 to find a cure for cancer. In the last 3 years, with the help of their partners the duo has raised $187,000 for this cause. In addition the group helps children and their families within their local communities who are suffering from cancer. This year they are supporting Kayli Hefner. Kayli a 6 year old with Leukemia. She was diagnosed in December and when they found her on St. Patrick's Day, she and her mother were homeless. They immediately found housing and funding for her, working through the State of Montana and raising donations. With their help, Kayli was able to go back to Denver for treatment.

2009 will be the third year in a row that The Bad Larrys have played MontanaFair. Their interaction with the audience while on and off the stage, make them a crowd favorite. In between sets you'll find them sharing a laugh with MontanaFair guests.
